

ch #07 TYPES OF THROW

ver: 26/10/26

This chapter describes types of throw.

R denotes right-hand(ed) .

eg "Rthrow" (right-handed throw) , Rfoot, Rcorner.

L denotes left-hand(ed) .

There are two types of throw - forehand and backhand.

A forehand throw is when you hold the wood so the label faces towards your pinky (when your hand is beneath the wood) .

Pinky?

Your pinky is your little finger.

I don't have one.

But most humans do.

A backhand throw is when you hold the wood so the label faces towards your thumb.

RF denotes Rhanded forehand.

RB denotes Rhanded backhand.

LF denotes Lhanded forehand.

LB denotes Lhanded backhand.

A wood that is thrown with sufficient force that its path is almost entirely straight is said to be fired or driven. We talk about firing or driving and say you fire or drive the wood.

RF

The label is on the L
(facing your pinky).

RB

The label is on the R
(facing your thumb).

LF

The label is on the R
(facing your pinky).

The label is on the L
(facing your thumb).

Are these bakewell tarts?

Yes.

I like bakewell tarts.

Me too.

SAFE & UNSAFE THROWS

A safe throw is one where the wood never exits your lane.

aka a safe wood.

A visiting throw is where the wood exits your lane and returns to it. The wood visits an adjacent lane.

eg B

aka a visiting wood or a visitor.

NOTE

If your woods are heavy or medium bias, they might regularly visit the adjacent lane and risk colliding with a neighbour's running wood.

Before you throw, check what is happening in the adjacent lane and wait until it's clear to throw.

An invasive throw is where the wood exits your lane and does not return. The wood invades an adjacent lane (or several).

aka an invasive wood or an invader.

OUTDATED TERMS

The following Anglo-Saxon terms are still used by turkeys but are now forbidden because they might offend.

Old people.

A club full of old people is a turkey farm.

An AFB throw is when the wood arrives exactly where you want it.

AFB ?

AFB = "absolutely fucking brilliant".

A NOB throw is when the wood arrives nowhere near where you want it.

NOB ?

NOB = "not obviously brilliant".

The following associated terms:

AFB wood, AFB end, AFB kata, AFB bowler, AFB person etc.

NOB wood, NOB end, NOB kata, load of NOBS, NOB bowler, NOB person etc.

When a wood is thrown with the wrong bias and invades an adjacent lane, the thrower shouts "hey youall, motherfuckerNOBwood init".

NOTE

The spirit of kata opposes any expression of emotion.
